

Hunting in France

The largest country in western Europe, France hosts the largest number of foreign tourists in the world each year. Famous for its foods, wines, culture, and its great cities, France has enjoyed over two thousand years of hunting history. France's rich wildlife resource is enjoyed by many visiting sportsmen every year. Most of the common continental species are found in France in abundance. Including red deer, fallow deer, roe deer, mouflon and wild boar. In the mountains there are also two types of chamois and Alpine Chamois. As in other countries hunting is done on private estates, where game is managed by professional game keepers and where guides follow age old traditions of scientific game management. Our hunts are conducted in three major regions. In the dense forests within a 100 mile radius of Paris, where we hunt for red deer, roe deer and wild boar. These species may also be hunted in the scenic, mountain forests province of Lozere as well as in the beautiful Pyrenean Mountains, where we also offer hunts for the Pyrenean chamois. In the south spectacular duck hunting is also available.
